TRIPLE ALLIANCE TO BE SIGNED BUT WILL FAIL OF ITS PURPOSE

Knickerbocker Says Pact Will Not Prevent War But May Win It

OPINION OF OBSERVERS

Russian Suspicion of British Intentions is The Chief Reason for Delay

By H. R. Knickerbocker
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS, June 28.—(INS)—The Triple Alliance of Britain, France and Russia will probably be signed but it will fail of its immediate purpose, to prevent the war from breaking out. It may, nevertheless, succeed in its ultimate purpose, to win the war the Allies when it does break out.

With disregard for the feelings of all concerned, this is the cold-blooded opinion today of Europe's best judges over the prospects of the three-months old negotiations which in their interminable fluctuations have become Europe's barometer of war and peace. Incurable Russian suspicion of British intentions remains the chief reason why the treaty has not yet been signed. The Russian argument is Oriental. The Kremlin fears that by entering the alliance on the British terms of simple mutual guarantee, Russia would run more danger of having to fight Germany alone than if she stayed out of the alliance altogether.

The Russians believe that by signing a triple alliance without the safeguards they insist upon, they would merely fall into a trap. On the one hand they would be certain that Hitler would attack them; on the other hand they would be encouraged to resist the Germans instead of adopting one of two alternative policies.

Either of these policies the Russians believe could save them from German attack.

To remain neutral in case Hitler attacks the West, or to be on the side of Germany.

But if they sign a triple alliance with the conditions upon which they insist, and which so far have been the stumbling block to conclusion of the pact, the Russians believe that Hitler would certainly attack them because:

(a) She would be convinced that their signature of the pact meant that Russia meant to fight Germany some time.

(b) She would fight the Russians on belief that Britain and France would not defend Russia as there are chances that the war could be confined to Germany and Russia alone.

(c) He would attack by way of the Baltic states, which would give him his chance to deal with Russia singly.

These are the Russian reasons for attaching what seems to the British such suspiciously unnecessary importance to the demand that Britain and France promise to support Russia if she sends the Red army into Estonia, Latvia and Finland to "prevent an advance, threatening the German attack."

But Russia has also particular military and naval reasons which she sent to the Kremlin, sufficiently important to justify and insist upon a treaty precisely right or no treaty at all.

Greenberg Loses Appeal Before Superior Court

PHILADELPHIA, June 28.—(INS)—Adam Greenberg, of Bucks county, arrested on a charge of arson, today had lost an appeal to the State Superior Court that he be released from bail and discharged without delay.

Greenberg was held in bond by a Justice of the Peace but when the latter did not note in the transcript the names of persons Greenberg wished to be notified for the trial, the defendant appealed for dismissal to the Bucks County Court. The county court refused his request.

The State Superior Court ruled that the lower court's order was merely interlocutory and not appealable until final action.

Now In Charge

MAJOR SAMUEL HEPBURN

WILL DIRECT ACTIVITIES OF SALVATION ARMY

Major Samuel Hepburn Placed In Charge of 15 Counties In the State

TO MEET WITH OFFICERS

Major Samuel Hepburn, Divisional Commander of The Salvation Army in Western New York, has been appointed Divisional Commander in this territory.

Major Hepburn's new command places him in supervisory charge of all Salvation Army activities in fifteen Pennsylvania counties, namely: Franklin, Adams, York, Lancaster, Chester, Lehigh, Lebanon, Dauphin, Cumberland, Delaware, Montgomery, Philadelphia, Bucks, Northampton and Berks; eight in Southern New Jersey—Cumberland, Cape May, Mercer, Camden, Atlantic, Burlington, Gloucester and Salem; and all of the State of Delaware.

Major Hepburn's appointment to his new post was made by General Evangeline Booth, commander of The Salvation Army throughout the world, and Commissioner Alexander M. Damon, territorial commander for the Eastern United States.

Major Hepburn succeeds to the command made vacant by the sudden death in Atlantic City on May 24 of Lieutenant Colonel James A. Harvey, who held the post for ten years.

On Thursday Major Hepburn will meet with the Officers of his new command at a Council at 3 p. m. in Memorial Temple, Broad street and Fairmount avenue, in Philadelphia, and at 8 p. m. that day, he will be formally installed by Commissioner Damon.

Prominent citizens and civic officials of this area will attend the installation ceremonies.

Major Hepburn, at 38, is the youngest divisional commander in the United States.

As commander of the Western New York Division, he was in charge of activities in 25 centers of work in that area, with headquarters in Buffalo. He was directly responsible to Commissioner Damon for the advancement of The Salvation Army in that extensive command.

Major Hepburn has been associated with The Salvation Army since his infancy, his parents dedicating him to the work early in life. He entered the Territorial Training College for Officers in New York City in 1919.

He was appointed to the command of the Western New York Division in 1936. During the three years prior to that he served in the same area as the Divisional Executive Secretary. His other appointments included five years as Divisional Executive Secretary in Southern Ohio and Kentucky, with headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio, and nine years in Cleveland, Ohio, three of which he served as the Divisional Young People's Secretary for Northeast Ohio.

In Buffalo, Major Hepburn was a director of the Council of Churches, and a member of several committees of the Council of Social Agencies.

Mrs. Major Hepburn, wife of the Divisional Commander, is a daughter of parents associated with the Salvation Army as officers over a long period of years. They are now honorably retired from active service.

Entering the Territorial Training College in New York in 1921, she has had command of Salvation Army field work in Athens, Ohio, and Logan, West Virginia. She was married to the Major in January, 1926, and they have five children, Brengle, Elizabeth Jean, Joseph James, David and Rose Eva.

In addition to aiding her husband with the general work of The Salvation Army in New York, Mrs. Hepburn was the Divisional Women's Home League Leader, responsible for the program and activities of the 30 Home League units operating in the area, with a membership of nearly 1,200 women.

Galento Still Confident

By Lawton Carver
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, June 28.—Tony Galento stubbornly insisted to the last day that he would break every rule in the book tonight and rough-house his way to victory over Joe Louis for the world's heavyweight championship.

Thus would he hurl out once again his battle cry as he waited through the last hours for his rendezvous at Yankee Stadium with the most feared fighter since Dempsey.

Loser of battles before on three technical knock-outs, and in all beaten in 22 of his 96 starts through 11 years, the Falstaffian tavern keeper generally was expected to make a brief attempt at capitalizing on his ability as a bar room brawler, but nevertheless a triumph for Louis was regarded as virtually certain.

The betting odds remain at a steady 7 to 1 against Galento's winning in the 15 scheduled rounds, and were even money against his keeping up for the fifth round. Almost unanimous opinion was all against him, despite his gameness, durability, punch and confidence. Few and practically all failed to see any finish other than Galento's battered and angered carcass on the ring floor. However, this fantasy which is so bizarre in some of its aspects, a fight reviled and ridiculed from the outset, will attract 40,000 spectators, and approximately $300,000 in receipts.

GIRL, 5, DROWNS IN POOL WHILE ON AN OUTING

Rescue Squads and Hospital Ambulance Staff Work Over Body for Nearly 4 Hours

IN WATER SIX FEET DEEP

Three first-aid units and a hospital ambulance staff worked strenuously yesterday afternoon for nearly four hours in an effort to revive a little girl who had been pulled from the pool at Penn Valley Park. Their efforts proved unsuccessful, however, and the child, Gertrude Stecht, 5, Kreswon Terrace, Willow Grove, was pronounced dead.

The child was visiting at the Park for the day and wandered away. She had been missing for about one hour, during which time frantic search had been made by her parents, and many others who volunteered their assistance. Finally, some of the volunteer aides dove into the pool and the body was discovered, in about six feet of water. It is believed that the child fell into the pool. Her limbs were bruised and several teeth knocked loose.

The Parkland unit of the Bucks County Rescue Squad was notified by a park official and the Croydon unit was called. Within 15 minutes the Croydon unit was at the scene with an inhalator. After working for a time they saw that their supply of oxygen would not last. The Abington Hospital and the rescue squad at Burholme and Roslyn were called. All three responded with inhalators.

Towels and hot water were supplied by the park officials and the staffs of the three first-aid units as well as of the Abington Hospital ambulance, worked strenuously for nearly four hours. Dr. Sane, of the Abington Hospital ambulance, pronounced the child dead.

Deputy Coroner Dr. James P. Lawler, Bristol, was summoned.

It is understood that the Pennsylvania Railroad will furnish a guide. The party will meet in the New York station at 11 this evening for the return trip.

The firemen are planning on running a carnival at Edgely Park the first two weeks in August and plans are being made for some of which Horace Walker is chairman.

Lavatory Police

(By "The Stroller")

Those bright boys down in Washington whose job it is to think of things for WPA to do, sure have been busy.

Here is the latest. The WPA is going to furnish lavatory police for the Bristol high school. There will be both policemen and policewomen, if I understand the project correctly.

It will be the duty of these "lavatory attendants" as some call them, to supervise—not clean—the lavatories. Those so employed are to be paid by the WPA while the Bristol School Board will buy "some suitable" wearing apparel such as white coats for the men and Hoover aprons for the women.

Thinking up WPA projects is no longer a business—it has been developed into a profession.

END THIS DICTATORSHIP!

After all these years it is amazing to find the American League awakening to the fact that the New York Yankees are human, and quite as subject to the law of averages as any other collection of athletes.

We refer to the somewhat belated recognition of the principle that good pitching shouldn't be wasted on several lesser ball clubs who are fighting for the left-overs, when the fire might better be concentrated on the Yanks.

New York has "granged-up" on the American League for years. They have an unbeatable farm system, and the club is wealthy. The Yankee reserve of players in the minors is said to be stronger today than the playing strength of at least three American League teams. If that is true, there is no mathematical reason why they should not continue to dominate the league for years to come, unless the top talent of the league is organized to stop them.

We call for a "Stop McCarthy" movement to end this dictatorship. The Yanks need to have their ears whittled down, and we can't be told that the seven other clubs are so short of pitching talent that it can't be done. If it is still true that the bigger they are the harder they fall, let's find it out. The Yanks should be chastened for the good of their immortal souls, and the salvation of box offices elsewhere. That job done, we can pitch pennies at a crack to see who gets the pennant.

WOMEN AS INVENTORS

The idea that inventing is exclusively a vocation for men has long been dispelled, since women have invaded the laboratory and have been found busily engaged at workbenches, fussing with lathes and saws and motors and belting, and have begun to play an important role in creating new devices for the increased comforts which go with the refinements of modern civilization. The activity of women in this field has never been in greater evidence than in this month of June, 1939, in which the fair sex "stole the show" with an extraordinary exhibit of new gadgets at the national inventors' congress in Chicago.

The devices likely to win the greatest popularity among those displayed have to do with women's traditional fields, such as the kitchen and fashions, but occasionally there are ventures into man's own bailiwick. An example of the latter is a Seattle woman's idea of the poor man's caddy, a golf bag on wheels. But most of the rest of the bold forays into the new are strictly feminine devices, such as an air-conditioned pie pan as insurance against soggy pie crusts; a makeup band to keep cool cream out of the hair; a makeup cape to protect the dress while powdering the nose; a combination of walking stick, beach cape, beach umbrella and vanity case, and buttons with a trick fastener to make them attach to the dress without aid of needle or thread.

Whether or not all these things will turn out as successful as planned depends on how far theory can be put into practice.

The Michigan Liquor Commission says it knows how to get more revenue without raising the price to the consumer. We know the answer to this one: Let the bartender pour.

The Great Game of Politics

ly which the Government is to become the great investment banker of the nation as "really a very modest program." Privately, no secret is made that there is a distinct political strategy back of it, that it has been timed to promote what, at any rate, will seem greater business activity in the pre-convention and pre-election period.

THIS, it is argued, is essential to the New Deal cause and the third-term boom, which has begun to sag. Congress is decidedly sour on the new plan and is not expected to accept it as a whole. It will be pruned down and restrictions imposed, but the Administration sponsors are confident that, before the adjournment, part of the plan will have been authorized. This will suit their book very well. For the failure to really invigorate business or reduce unemployment they then can blame a Congress which would not give the President all he asked. In the meantime they can prepare the "next step," whatever it is. At this time these wizards of the White House themselves do not know.

THE sure thing is that in this, and in other ways, they are busy increasing the weight and power of the Government over private business, increasing the Federal control over credit more completely, extending the Federal function into the investment and banking field in a way that eventually will mean Government domination or ownership on an amazing scale. Coupled with the Mead bill, backed by the Administration, for Government insurance of bank loans to small businessmen, this latest program seems the most direct assault on the system that has been made.

IT is a straight stride toward a Socialistic state, where all credit will be controlled by the Government, all business, big and little, will lean upon the Government, States and municipalities be so heavily obligated to the Government and so many persons supported by the Government that individual independence and initiative will be wholly lost. A few more steps and the condition predicted more than a hundred years ago by the great French writer, de

"THERE'S ALWAYS TOMORROW"

CHAPTER I

WAKING early on that fateful Monday morning of enchanting Indian summer that ushered in her twenty-fifth birthday, there was no happier young woman in San Francisco than Antoinette Goddard.

Sunlight filtered on Brock Milbank's picture in his handsome oval frame on her dressing table. The perfume of Brock's roses filled the air with lingering scent. Petals were scattered like drops of heart's blood on the great white bearskin that made an island on the parquet floor. Well, what matter? There would be more roses—her favorite flower—from Brock on this morning of her birthday, and presently the telephone by her bedside would be ringing and the man she was going to marry would be telling her that he could scarcely wait till their luncheon today at the St. Francis, and she would thrill to the endearments that made this polo-playing scion of the old San Francisco Milbank family the fascinating lover he was.

One's twenty-fifth birthday! Lacking a Brock, it would be the right moment to do a little mental stock-taking. In France, for instance, passing this landmark meant to coiffer Sainte Catherine—make one's official entry into old maidhood, if unwed!

Antoinette laughed aloud at this, for her, impossible situation! Life had run very smoothly for the only child of the old pioneer family whose timber interests were far-flung in the Northwest.

"And to think I once worried about a career, wanting to be a writer, a singer, a painter!" she addressed Brock's picture from the dreamy depths of her bed. "But the moment you popped the question, I knew the real, the only career for a woman is giving herself to the man she loves, making a home with him, making him happy, and to the devil with careers and all the stupid makeshifts that girls kid themselves with!"

It had been six years since her debut. Previous to that, there had been two years in France. Later, a trip to Honolulu, Tahiti, and the Orient. Oh, she had traveled! More, she had surprised everybody, including herself, by winning her diploma from the University of Stamford, majoring in French and English literature. That had been a year ago. It had been fun attending the university with its gracious campus, cheerful coed spirit and gay parties. The university was within easy reach of her father's ranch.

It was at her graduation festivities that she had renewed acquaintance with Brock Milbank, red-headed, captivating Brock of the chameleon moods and sophisticated air. Debonair! That was the word to describe him. And he was oddly good-looking, despite his small head and rather close-set eyes that were flecked with brown. When one of her friends had told her that he could turn charm on and off like a faucet, Antoinette had been indignant. To her, Brock was utterly winning. His moods only lent him a fascinating mystery. When he had proposed to her on that never-to-be-forgotten week-end at Del Monte, she had accepted him immediately. Now, as she lay in her bed in the solid old mansion on Nob Hill that had been built by her great-grandfather in the "days of gold," through the open windows over and beyond Brock's picture she could look far down to the blue water of the Bay, hear the sirens of innumerable craft, and by sitting up in bed, she could glimpse the Golden Gate leading to other lands.

"But home is where the heart is!"

thought Antoinette. Was ever a city so magical?

Home!

They would live in San Francisco, she and Brock. Here they knew everybody who was anybody. Theirs would be the pleasant life of the so-called idle rich. Why cavil at the term? Why scramble for gold as her great-grandfather had done, when bride and groom had plenty?

As befitted the union of a Milbank and a Goddard, they would entertain. Perhaps a yacht. Polo at Santa Barbara. A summer camp at Lake Tahoe. Golf at Monterey.

She rose, a slender, long-limbed girl in blue silk pajamas. Slipping her feet into mules, she walked over

Toni that might escape a woman, but could blaze a disturbing trail on a man's senses.

And she was utterly unconscious of this quality of sex-attraction... call it what you will. But the woman who has it doesn't have to be good-looking or patrician, for the gods have given her the supreme gift in a man's universe—a weapon to undo a Sampson—to pull his world about his ears while singing the song of the siren—though Toni herself, despite her degree in literature, would have been the last person to liken herself to Cleopatra or Delilah.

While standing idly before the mirror, she patted the curls on the the bearskin rug to Brock's photograph, lifted it and kissed it.

Over its silver rim, she smiled at herself in the glass. And what she saw mirrored there, would have given almost any woman in love confidence.

Luminous dark eyes, deep-set and dreaming, and fringed with incredibly long lashes, gave back her smile. So did her softly curving mouth that was like a bright red flower.

Her throat was long and slim and white, and she had a proud manner of carrying her sleek, dark head. There was something of the smoothness of the wild duck's in its polish, in its quick, nervous turn, its glossy flatness atop, though here the resemblance ended, for sleekness gave way to a riot of curls at the nape of the neck.

"Patrician! That's the word to describe our Toni," her father had more than once proudly said to his wife. And indeed, there was breeding in every feature of the face that was not exactly pretty, but something more—something that had a touch of the exotic mingled with nobility, something that seemed to flow through the long slim lines of her body, something that had overcome the hitherto impervious Brock Milbank when, to his own surprise, he had proposed to her that day at Del Monte.

Under her outer coolness, an inner fire, a quiet excitement about nape of her neck. Her hands were lovely, and beautifully cared for. She had sat for a San Francisco sculptor for her hands, and once in Paris for a needy artist. Both exhibits had won prizes, and fame for the sculptor and the artist.

She was taking physical stock of herself now. Wondering what it really was that Brock saw in her. San Francisco society teemed with lovely girls, pert, bored with life, and avid divorcees from the East or Middle West, 'rairie' to go—to China, or Tahiti, but perferably into the arms of matrimony again.

Jessica Payne, of the Payne Packing Products of Chicago, an exquisite, unscrupulous blonde who had come to San Francisco some weeks ago by way of Reno, made no secret of her predilection for the Milbank son and heir. Not that Toni minded, since Brock gave Jessica small encouragement. She had even gently chided her fiancé for his ludicrous imitations of the merry widow behind her back that was so nakedly exposed at numerous San Francisco gatherings.

Yes, Brock was hers, and the fact that other women liked him, she decided, was flattering to her. Jealousy was belittling, a confession of inferiority. Just the same, in the secret places of her heart, Toni had been tinglingly aware that she had felt it.

Doak-Landreth Wedding Takes Place In St. James' Church

The most attractive wedding of the present season occurred yesterday afternoon at four o'clock in St. James Episcopal Church, here, when Miss Meta F. Landreth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David L. Landreth, 102 Radcliffe street, became the bride of William C. Doak, Mr. Doak is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Boone Doak, 134 West Coulter street, Germantown.

Rev. George Boswell, rector of the church, assisted by Rev. Lockhart Amerman, Sewickley, performed the ceremony. Lilies and baby breath were arranged on the altar, while palms and flowers decorated the church. Mrs. Minerva Epstein, organist, played Lohengrin's Wedding March as the bridal party entered the church.

Two maids of honor and six bridesmaids attended the bride. Miss Emily Landreth, sister of the bride, and Miss Isabel Moberly, St. Louis, Mo., a cousin, were the maids of honor.

The bridesmaids were: Mrs. Robert Biddle, 3rd, Berwyn; Mrs. Roy H. Snyder, Haverford; Miss Charlotte Landreth, sister of the bride; Miss Louise Landreth, Pine Grove, a cousin of the bride; Miss Frances Eastburn, 1120 Radcliffe street; Miss Beatrice Doak, sister of the groom.

John Forsythe Glenn, Charlottesville, Va., served as best man.

The ushers were: Charles B. Doak, Jr., and James Doak, 3rd., Germantown, brothers of the groom; Charles Finley, 3rd., Charles Hooff and Edmund Cabene, Philadelphia; John Walker Jones, Pine Bluff, Arkansas; Mitchell Woods Bacon, Charlestown, West Virginia; Robert Blake, New York; Robert Biddle, 3rd., Berwyn; Edward Landreth, Pine Grove, a cousin of the bride.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was beautifully gowned in white Chantilly lace over satin, fashioned on Princess lines. The fitted bodice featured the heart-shaped neckline and the long sleeves slightly puffed from the shoulder to the elbow, were close fitting to the wrist, tapering to points over the hands. The long full skirt fell in graceful folds to form the train. She wore white satin sandals, a bridal veil of tulle with a tulle halo, and carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

The maids of honor were attractive in gowns of aqua net over taffeta of the same tone. The close-fitting bodices were made with square cut necklines and cap sleeves, and the skirt was bouffant style. The bodices were trimmed with bands of peach tone velvet ribbon and a band of the ribbon encircled the waistlines which tied in a small bow and long ends on the left side. Each wore a large leghorn hat trimmed with peach tone streamers, silver slippers and carried water lilies.

The bridesmaids wore gowns fashioned like the maids of honor, but different in color. They were attired in peach tone net over taffeta to match, trimmed with aqua velvet, large leg-horn hats with aqua velvet streamers, silver slippers and carried water lilies.

The groom, best man and ushers were all attired in blue coats, white rousers and white shoes.

Mrs. Landreth, mother of the bride, wore a gown of grey chiffon, black straw hat trimmed with a velvet bow, black slippers, white gloves and a corsage of purple orchids.

The mother of the groom was attired in a gown of poudre blue chiffon, large natural straw hat, silver slippers and a corsage of gardenias. A reception was held on the lawn at the home of the bride's parents. About 300 guests attended. A buffet supper was served. A dinner for the bridal party and a few additional guests was served in the house at 7:30 o'clock. The rooms were decorated with bouquets of cut flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Doak left last evening for a two weeks' honeymoon trip and upon their return will reside temporarily at the Landreth home. The bride travelled in a grey silk dress with white dots, fashioned jacket effect, black and white straw hat trimmed with black velvet, and white accessories.

Mrs. Doak was born in Bristol, graduated from the Agnes Irwin School, Wynnewood. The groom attended the Germantown Friends School and graduated from the University of Virginia. He is a member of the Merion Cricket Club and St. Anthony's Club and Fraternity. Mr. Doak is associated in business with his father.

The bride's gifts to her attendants were silver bracelets. Each bracelet had the name of the bridesmaid and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy," the sensational Warner Bros. picture playing at the Ritz Theatre, represents a complete reversal of Hollywood precedent in more ways than one.

In the first place, the motion picture producers in the past have avoided controversial subjects like the plague. But Warners could hardly have chosen a subject packed with more potential dynamite than the spy picture.

SENSATIONAL FIELDING FEATURES GAME HERE

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
DIAMOND at ODD FELLOWS
Umpire, Morrell; Scorer, Tomlinson
(Landreth's field)

Sensational fielding featured the Grundy-Odd Fellows tilt last evening on the former's field as the Grundy team emerged the victors by the score of 7-1.

Charlie Ibric came through with the fielding gem of the evening when he raced deep into center to spear Hibbs' line behind a small tree. The Grundy center-fielder fell in fielding the ball but held on to it for the out.

Joe Antonelli repeated his pitching performance of last week by holding the Oddies to a lone bingle. This hit a triple from the bat of Jimmy Cooper accounted for the losers' only marker. Zeffries was on base at the time.

Milt Jones held the Grundyites to six hits but these were timely made to give the woolen twisters their markers. Jones had a bad first canto in which six runs crossed the plate on five hits, a hit batsman, and a pass. Antonelli helped his own cause here by a double with two on base. The remainder of the tilt saw Jones hold the ultimate winners to a lone tally and bingle.

FIFTH WARD CLUB HITS HARD; WINS GAME, 18-9

Behind the heavy hitting of Mayo, Cancelli and DiAngelo, the Fifth Ward Sporting Club continued their winning ways in the Community Softball League by trouncing the Superior Zinc Works ten, 18-9.

Despite the one-sided score, the tilt was better played than indicated. The Warders were charged with eight errors but these did not prove disastrous at any time.

Galzerano, the Warders' hurler, was hit rather hard, being touched for fifteen safe blows but these were widely scattered. DiAngelo, a new addition to the Fifth Ward line-up, Cancelli and Cancelli, hit home runs.

BOYS' CATHOLIC CLUB LOSES TO CROYDON Y. M. A.

Ted Devoe's masterful pitching shut out the Boys' Club with no runs and only two hits. Not only did he pitch well but he collected himself three hits and no less than fourteen batters fanned the breeze for him. This is the third shutout for Y. M. A. pitchers in a row. Mulligan and Singer collected the only two hits off Devoe while the Y. M. A. batters had a total of twelve hits with Devoe getting three, and Cahill, Swope and Holland getting two apiece.

CATHOLIC B. C. BEAT CORNWELLS

On Wood's Memorial field last night the Catholic Boys' Club of St. Mark's put on a free hitting exhibition to the delight of crowd, chasing two Cornwells pitchers before the third inning was completed. These two clubs battled in a thrilling 11 inning game early in the season the Boys' Club winning 5 to 4. The Cornwells boys were anxious to avenge this defeat but the heavy clubbing of McGee, Dugan and Quigley was too much for the boys from Cornwells. Manager Dan McDevitt has been hoping to get the boys into stride due to a late season start and over-anxious playing of the boys trying to make good.

LANGHORNE RACES ATTRACTS STARS

Speed stars from near and far will compete in the All American championship 250 miles stock car race at Langhorne Speedway, Pa., on July 4, the first circular mile track stock car race ever sanctioned by the contest board of the American Automobile Association. Upper action picture shows Milt Marion roaring through the sands to victory in the last AAA sanctioned stock car race ever held, at Daytona Beach in 1936, while center head is that of Tommy Elmore, Jacksonville, Fla., youth who fed that race until the last lap when he had a blow out and Marion beat him home. Center photograph shows flags floating in breeze above a typical Langhorne crowd. Upper center are, left to right, Buster Warke, Walnutport, Pa.; Pedro Cortez, Mexico City, and John Rice, Martinsburg, Va., who won the 150-mile Daytona Beach stock car race on March 19.

NINE DRIVERS ASSURED OF BEING IN AUTO RACE

Nine Pennsylvania drivers ranging from newcomers on the race track to seasoned veterans are assured to start in the All-American 250 miles AAA sanctioned stock car race on July 4 at Langhorne Speedway, it was announced today by Promoter Ralph Hankinson.

Not only are nine men qualified, but pole position will be held by Ted Nyquist, Reading, Pa., who won the first ten mile race last Sunday at a 75 m. p. h. clip.

Walt Franks, Easterville; George Lapworth, Philadelphia; Bill Shoop, York, Pa.; Walt Schindler, Philadelphia; Tommie Toner, Rosedale; Ken

Hickey, Ft. Washington; Bill Madden, Bryn Mawr, and Metz Simmins are also sure to start.

Nyquist in an Oldsmobile is on the pole. Franks in a Ford starts inside in the third row. Lapworth in a Ford on the fourth row; Shoop in a Buick on the seventh. Toner in a Ford on the fourteenth. Hickey in a Ford on the fifteenth. Madden in a Nash on the nineteenth, and Simmins in a Studebaker in the twentieth row. Zeke Meyer and Freddie Winnal, Indianapolis Speedway drivers and placement finishers in the past may be provided cars before Sunday, July 2, to attempt qualification in the 22 spots left vacant.

However, pilots from a distance beyond 200 miles of Philadelphia, ranging from Mexico to Maine and Los Angeles to Florida, with a good representation from the midwest will get choice starting positions, although Broncho Bill Schindler, Goshen, N. Y., has been allotted pole position in the first race Sunday with Tommie Elmore, Jacksonville, Fla., alongside and Bob Baker, Canton, Ohio, having drawn third starting position.

Baker, who was on hand Sunday, took advantage of his geographical location to compete next Sunday, rather than take an assured qualification June 25.

"I hope to put my supercharged Graham-Paige in front in that first heat and get that place alongside Nyquist," says Baker.

VAN AKEN PITCHES SOFTBALL TEAM TO VICTORY

One of the most exciting games of the first half of the Church Softball League was played on the Third Ward field last evening.

The game was between Harriman and Bristol Methodist. It was played hard by both teams from the first pitch. Van Aken pitched fine ball from the start, allowing but eight hits.

Moss, the losing hurler, gave up 15 hits, which accounted for the seven runs. At the end of the sixth inning the score was 6-6 which showed that it was close from the first. Schweizer's long hit to left field, started the last inning rally for the Harriman group.

AMBLER NINE TO MEET LANDRETH TEAM HERE

Tomorrow evening Ambler will be the attraction at Landreth Ball Park, when they come here to meet the Landreth team.

The game between these clubs last year was a very fast contest, being played in one hour and 21 minutes, the farmers winning, 3 to 0; although they made but seven hits to Ambler's five, and of the 75 chances handled there was only one error.

Livezey will be on the mound for Ambler with Whitcock behind the plant. Al Carey will probably toss them up to Jack Broderick.

The Ambler club is one of the best ball clubs in that section, and the fans should see a good game at 6.15 tomorrow night.
